Missouri lawmakers moving ahead with tougher restrictions on abortion

By Allison Pecorin

apecorin@kcstar.com

JEFFERSON CITY

A decision by a federal judge to rescind some laws restricting abortions in Missouri had Planned Parenthood advocates celebrating last week — but Republicans aren't going down without a fight

A handful of bills making their way through the legislature aim to make it more difficult for women to get an abortion in Missouri, ranging from new inspection standards for abortion clinics to new parental notification requirements

These legislative efforts are set against a promise by Missouri Attorney General Josh Hawley to maintain the state's abortion restrictions by continuing to fight last week's court decision

Hawley is the first vocally anti-abortion Missouri attorney general in 24 years And one of the legislative proposals this year would give the attorney general the ability to enforce state abortion laws

Under current law, local prosecutors are the only officials who can bring suit against those who fail to follow the state's abortion regulations

Samuel Lee, a lobbyist for Campaign Life Missouri, said that in more liberal pockets of the state, such as Kansas City and St Louis, those who break abortion laws often are not prosecuted

"The legislature can pass a bill, the governor can sign it, it can be challenged in court and defended and upheld," Lee said "But unless a local prosecutor or somebody enforces the laws, it doesn't make any difference"

State Sen Jill Schupp, a St Louis County Democrat, said that while she's overjoyed by the district court ruling, she thinks new abortion bills are adding new layers of obstacles for women trying to access their right to an abortion

"In many ways Planned Parenthood has been on the defense and women's rights have been under attack," Schupp said "Advocates are on the defense"

And while the court decision is a victory for Schupp and other abortion rights advocates, Lee said he wouldn't be surprised if the decision was overturned in the future

"It has been fairly common for state abortion regulations that were challenged to be struck down at the federal district court levels," Lee said "And to (later) have those decisions in whole or in part enforced at the 8th Circuit level and sometimes at the United States Supreme Court"

That's true At different times higher courts have overturned district court decisions in Missouri relating to use of Medicaid funding for abortions, parental consent for abortions, and several other abortion-related measures

Which is why Schupp thinks it's important to prevent any additional abortion restrictions from becoming law

She opposes giving Hawley additional prosecuting power Schupp said Hawley's continued fight against abortion might put women's lives at risk

"I'm really disappointed that (Hawley) is going to spend taxpayer dollars and time and resources doing that," Schupp said "I think that he is getting in the way of a political decision and I think that it's an abuse of his power"

Hawley's office did not respond to requests for comment

The additional prosecuting powers for the Missouri attorney general's office are included in a wide-ranging abortion bill in the Senate sponsored by Sen Bob Onder, a St Charles County Republican Its main focus is new regulations on the disposal of fetal tissue after an abortion

Under Onder's bill, all fetal tissue would be submitted to a pathologist who would create a report on all tissues received. The bill also would enforce significantly higher regulations for hospitals and surgical centers performing abortions.

"Fetal organ harvesting by abortion clinics and trafficking by various middlemen is a lucrative and grisly business that some at the highest level of the abortion industry have engaged in," Onder said during floor debate

Current law requires that a representative sample of tissue be submitted to a pathologist after a reported abortion. But this bill would require that all tissue be submitted

The bill also would make it a requirement that all centers performing abortion be annually inspected at an unannounced date and time

"We need to regularly inspect clinics in the interest of health and safety of women," Onder said "And yet in eight of the past 14 years, no inspections were performed."

But Alison Drieth of NARAL Pro-Choice Missouri said legislation like this isn't about protecting women's health, but outlawing abortion

"It's a targeted legislation for abortion providers," Dreith said "The anti-choice community feels that it's an easy way, with more burdensome regulations, where they could find abortion providers to slip up and that they could ultimately shut clinics down"

Rep Diane Franklin, a Camdenton Republican, is sponsoring a House version of Onder's bill

She said it would ensure fetal tissues are not trafficked or sold illegally throughout the state by more strictly monitoring pathology reports

Currently, Franklin said, not all reports are accurately accounted for

"That just opens the door for mismanagement, mishap and misplacement of fetal remains," Franklin said "I think (the bill) provides a peace of mind, if the object is, according to federal law, that these will not be sold for profit"

The U S District Court decision last week struck down measures requiring that doctors have hospital admitting privileges and that facilities meet the standards of ambulatory surgical centers. It came after the U S. Supreme Court struck down nearly identical abortion restrictions in Texas last year

After last week's court decision, Planned Parenthood announced it would begin offering abortion services in four of its clinics across the state — in Kansas City, Joplin, Springfield and Columbia

Currently, abortions are performed only in Planned Parenthood's St Louis clinic

Franklin called Planned Parenthood's plans to expand abortion services a "poke in the eye for Missouri"

But Dreith said the court decision won't be enough if other regulations are put in place this session

"It's a real shame that the legislature, many of whom are proponents of these measures, claim to be small-government fiscal conservatives," Dreith said, "when they routinely enact unconstitutional legislation to put the government between a woman and her doctor"

Hi Will,

Wanted to tell you about the information below. It appears that somehow a mistake was made with the address about the case I had sent to you last week regarding the former abortion provider, Robert Crist, at the St Louis Planned Parenthood. I am sure that you can go to Pacer and find out a lot more than I can. Just wanted to let you know what we found out.

Pray for sunshine on Saturday! We are!

Have a great weekend, Thank you! Kathy Forck

Ms Schrader,

This is a follow email to our phone conversation on April 26, 2017 about Robert Crist at which time I informed you that the Robert A Crist Jr (1502 Waterbridge Ct Fleming Island FL, 32003) is not a physician but a licensed Professional Engineer Robert D Crist, MD was licensed with the Board until January 31st 2017 At the time of the malpractice claim that you see on Missouri Case Net web site, Dr Robert D Crist was a licensed physician with the Board of Healing Arts in the state of Missouri It does appear that MO Case Net has pulled the professional engineers address instead of the physicians address. Unfortunately we cannot correct their mistake The case was filed in January and is fairly new I do hope that they find their mistake soon Thank you for your time in this matter and if you have any further questions please feel free to call

I am sure you are up to your eyeballs in flooding matters. Please thank the governor and the staff involved for being proactive in responding to the emergency and calling in the National Guard and other groups.

This budget matter may not be your bailiwick, but please pass this along to the person to whom it is. Any help you and they can give would be greatly appreciated by me and the whole Catholic and pro-life community...

Since last year, we've been trying to get additional state funding for a pro-life maternity home in the City of St. Louis, the Catholic Charities' Queen of Peace Center. Queen of Peace specializes in a very difficult population of pregnant and postpartum women and children - those with opioid and other substance abuse issues. These moms and kids require a higher level of treatment, and of course, it is much more expensive to care for them.

No one disputes the excellent work that Queen of Peace does, and in fact they are part of DMH's Comprehensive Substance Treatment and Rehabilitation (CSTAR) Program for women and children, and currently get some funding from DMH. This Catholic Charities agency is the largest women and children's CSTAR program in the state and boasts the largest number of drug-free births.

At our request last year in the budget for the Division of Behavioral Health within DMH, then-Senate Appropriations Chairman Kurt Schaeffer added some specific language to the budget to provide Queen of Peace some extra help – specifically an additional $254,518 (see the attached "Fact Sheet" from Queen of Peace). That language stayed in HB 10, was signed by Gov. Nixon, and was not line-item vetoed.

However, DMH took the position that since the money for Queen of Peace was tied to existing funding and not new funding, DMH had no authority to actually spend the additional $254,518. However, the Senate Appropriations staff wrote flexibility language in the appropriation, plus the opportunity to transfer the money from the Department of Social Services (DSS) for this program.

Maybe DMH was being hyper-technical. Maybe it was the general tendency of the Nixon Administration to not fund programs that it had not initially proposed. Perhaps DSS didn't want to release the funds to DMH. Possibly it was pushback from the Missouri Coalition for Community Behavioral Heal hcare, which thought we were robbing Peter to pay Paul.

Regardless, Queen of Peace did not get that additional money, although our understanding is that DMH agreed to provide them some one-time funding to see them through FY2016-2017.

This year, the Senate added the funding back in for Queen of Peace, in SCS HCS HB 10, in section 10.110 (an excerpt):

further provided that up to an additional $254,518 may be used for substance abuse treatment services, by a non-profit Comprehensive Substance Treatment and Rehabilitation (CSTAR) residential facility located in a city not within a county, in conjunction with the Department of Social Services, provided to pregnant women, whose child will be eligible for MO HealthNet services, and who are at risk of substance abuse, including opioid addiction

Queen of Peace started getting some of the Alternatives to Abortion (A2A) funding for the first time in February, but frankly, once the A2A program was effectively transferred last year to DSS from OA for he program's administration, we've gotten numerous complaints from he pro-life agencies about how difficult it has become to apply for and qualify for reimbursement under A2A. But that is a discussion for another time.

What we are asking for is that the Greitens Administration, DMH, DSS - whomever - do what it can during this last week when the budget needs to be approved (e.g., speak to the House/Senate budget conferees to keep the language or modify it to make it work) - and later - to help Queen of Peace. We have done what we can to try to get extra funds for them, but we need someone somewhere within the executive branch to work to find a solution. I know that Lara Pennington, the executive director of the agency, and her staff would be delighted to have Gov. Greitens and the First Lady come and visit so they can see firsthand the important work they are doing.

Thank you for considering this during what I know is a very busy time.

Friends,

Our pro-abortion opponents are pulling out all stops to get the Missouri General Assembly to fund Planned Parenthood.

But pro-life lawmakers are standing strong. They are making every effort possible to limit tax dollars going to Planned Parenthood – especially since the abortion giant now vows to expand from one to five abortion clinics in Missouri because of the recent lawsuit that they have won in federal court

Please tell your own State Senator and State Representative to stay firm, and to oppose having your tax dollars go to any person who or entity which performs or refers for abortion. Lawmakers will be making final changes to the budget proposal next week, with a constitutionally-mandated Friday, May 6, 6:00 PM deadline.

Missouri budget amendment would 'decimate' system of family planning clinics, providers say

By Durrie Bouscaren • April 28, 2017

Clinics that provide contraception and checkups for about 70,000 uninsured Missouri women may lose state funding next fiscal year, if they give patients information about abortion

An amendment in the state budget, expected to be finalized next week, bars the Missouri Women's State-Funded Health Services Program from covering care by a doctor or clinic that offers abortion services, as defined by a state law for sex education. That includes those that provide abortion referrals. The provision is an expansion of a rule passed last year, which cut organizations that provide abortions out of the program and cost Missouri $8.3 million in federal funding

"This amendment goes much farther and could actually decimate the entire family planning network," said Michelle Trupiano, executive director of the Missouri Family Health Council "When you start eliminating providers and restricting who can say what, at the end of the day you're going to restrict access"

Trupiano's organization dispenses federal Title X funds to 71 clinics for family planning services throughout Missouri, including federally qualified health clinics and Planned Parenthood A 2007 rule requires Title X recipients to tell pregnant women about all of their options in a neutral manner upon request That includes prenatal care, adoption, and abortion — discussions that could force these providers out of the state's program, Trupiano said

"Title X providers or really any health care provider that gives information and full access of information to women would no longer be able to participate in the program," Trupiano said "At the end of the day that limits access for women."

Lobbyist Sam Lee, director of the anti-abortion group Campaign Life Missouri, said the difference between counseling and referral is clear

"I have no qualms with a counselor having a discussion with a pregnant client about her options," Lee said "The difference is to then go ahead and tell her,

Dear Samuel.

I wanted you to be aware that pro-life bills in your state legislature are stuck and may not pass before the May 12th deadline. It seems the Missouri state Senate has slowed down to a crawl... leaving pro-life legislation in a dangerous position. The stakes are very high. It is critical that your legislature exert state influence to stop the St. Louis Board of Aldermen's anti-discriminat on measure to make St. Louis a "sanctuary city" for abortion. Another bill would defund Planned Parenthood, and yet another would forbid the use of aborted fetal tissue in experimentat on and require it to be disposed of in a dignified manner. And SBA List's top state pr ority, banning abort on at 20 weeks when the baby can feel pain, is stuck way back in the House.

Click here to send a message to your state senator right now to tell them to allow pro-life legislation to a

Your new Governor, Er c Greitens, is strongly pro-life and wants to lead on the issue. The legislature, hamstrung now by the state Senate, must give Governor Gre tens the tools he needs to protect Missouri lives!

I know you don't want St. Louis – or any other city in Missouri – to be a 'sanctuary c ty' for abortion. But did you know that the whole country is watching and wa ting for your legislature to do something to stop it?

There is no excuse to allow the St. Louis discriminatory actions to stand, or to turn a blind eye to the lives of unborn babies, in the name of politics as usual. Please cl ck here to tell your state Senator today to do their job and protect women and babies in Missouri by allowing pro-life legislation to move, and move quickly!
